Program Details

The online Master of Science in Education (M.S.E.) in Curriculum and Instruction combines the flexibility of an online learning format with the respect of a rigorous graduate degree from the University of Kansas.

This is a practitioner-focused master’s degree for current educators who want to make a difference with effective instructional practices and curriculum development strategies. At KU, you can challenge yourself to become a better educator while increasing your future earning potential with a master’s degree.

PROGRAM BENEFITS

• Earn a respected, NCATE-accredited degree from a Top 10 School of Education (among public universities)\(^1\)
• Complete your course work anytime, anywhere through our innovative online format
• Learn from dedicated faculty who teach with an emphasis on applying research in real-world situations to improve instructional practice
• Create a working instructional portfolio that can be directly applied in your own classroom
• Submit your application with no GRE requirement for admission into the program

PROGRAM STRUCTURE

• 10 courses taken in sequence
• 30 credits
• 8 weeks per course
• Complete in as few as 2 years

ADMISSIONS REQUIREMENTS

To apply to the Master’s in Curriculum and Instruction, your first step is completing the online application form. Prior to starting the form we recommend that you review our application checklist.

To be considered for admission, prospective students must have completed a bachelor’s degree with a GPA of 3.0 or greater (on a 4.0 scale). Applicants with an undergraduate GPA below 3.0 should contact an Admissions Advisor for information about provisional admissions.

Our Admissions Advisors are here to help answer your questions regarding admission requirements and licensure. If you have questions, please email us at onlineinfo@ku.edu or call us at 855-639-7799.

International applicants must meet English language proficiency requirements.

\(^1\) Retrieved on January 9, 2018 from usnews.com/best-graduate-schools/university-of-kansas-155317/overall-rankings
Program Details

WHAT YOU’LL LEARN
At the University of Kansas, we believe that pursuing your master’s degree as a teacher is not just important for increasing your earnings power and improving your resume. More importantly, it’s about making a difference in the lives of the students you teach and becoming the best educator you can be.

You will make that difference by learning practical instructional techniques that work in a variety of classroom settings. You will also learn strategies for how to design effective curricula that set you up for success before your first student ever steps in the classroom.

FACULTY
The University of Kansas brings a rich academic tradition into the online environment. The KU School of Education is fully committed to KU’s mission of educating leaders, building healthy communities and making discoveries that change the world. Our Curriculum & Teaching faculty are at the leading edge of research and practice working to improve the quality of instruction in different subject areas and in different education settings.

AFTER GRADUATION
The Master’s in Curriculum and Instruction is designed for passionate educators who are ready to take a step forward in their careers with a challenging, practice-based online master’s program.

Graduates of this program are qualified specialists with job prospects in a diverse number of settings. Many work in public and private schools as master teachers, instructional coordinators and curriculum specialists. Other graduates have worked as curriculum designers and specialists in a corporate or publishing setting.